properties of the material known as transport properties. For a large class of materials, the laws that govern the transport processes are quite simple. There are a rather large number of transport properties in principle, but three have, by far, the greatest practical and scientific importance. They are the diffusion coefficient, the viscosity and the thermal conductivity and are associated

Transport properties of a dense plasma

Abstract The Boltzmann transport equation is solved for a dense plasma in the fourth Chapman-Enskog approximation. Computational results in the form of values of ionization, pressure, internal energy, electroconductivity and electron thermal conductivity were obtained for a multicomponent plasma containing such metals as lithium, calcium
